

Intelligent machines think and behave like humans

Systems learn without being programmed to learn

Machines think in a way similar to the human brain; they handle huge amounts of data using artificial neural networks