

15 Vacuum flasks usually have silvered walls that help to keep the contents of the flask hot.

Why are the walls silvered?

- A to absorb thermal energy from the air around the flask
- B to increase the rate of convection inside the flask
- C to reduce energy loss to the surroundings by conduction
- D to reflect thermal radiation back into the flask